FORGET TOILET PAPER

Skip, skip, skip to the loo

If Dad's the king of his castle, he deserves a throne like the Neorest.

The $5,200 toilet—you read it right—does everything but hand you a magazine to read.

"It's almost absurd what they came up with," says Gene Hara, vice president of Banner Plumbing & Heating Supplies, 355 Hastings Drive, Buffalo Grove, which sells the Neorest.

The toilet begins its performance as soon as a person enters the wash-room. The lid lifts automatically. The seat is heated (it can be preset to be ready for you) and when you're finished, a wand appears and gives you a spray of warm water.

"And there's a dryer that'll blow you dry," Hara says. "Toilet paper becomes, from what I understand, less of a need."

The Neorest doesn't have a tank—

a cyclone flush eliminates the necessity for one—and it also deodorizes the room and cleans itself. And after you leave, the lid closes.
